

Facebook CEO Apologizes For Data Breach Ahead of Congressional Testimony

An Yuan

April 11, 2018

Facebook has confirmed that private messages were included in data involved in the Cambridge Analytica scandal. Cambridge Analytica, a British voter profiling company, was hired to target likely supporters in 2016 by US President Donald Trump's campaign.

We are now in what is called Age of Big Data. So the security of data is a big challenge that many IT companies are facing now. And users are paying increasingly attention to the data security. But Robin Li, CEO of Baidu, said Chinese users are willing to change privacy for convenience in China Development Forum.

From my point of view, we seem like 'have to' rather 'want to'. Sometimes, we have to agree some rules for normal use, though we know that might lead to leak data. So every company should take responsibility to prevent itself and data of users from being misused.